Our long, cold, snowy winter is drawing to a close. The long-awaited coming of spring is being celebrated by the artists at Rail Walk Gallery with an exhibition of colorful, spring-themed artwork.

The seven artists, Carol Dunkley, Sharon Forthofer, Karen Frazer, Annette Ragone Hall, Patt Legg, Cathy Sigmon, and Marietta Foster Smith, will be showing their colors in a month-long group show as they present works of art in a variety of mediums.

In addition to the large gallery space they all share that spans the front of the building, each of the artists has their own working studio space. All throughout the gallery and in the individual studio spaces, visitors will find original paintings in watercolor, acrylic, oil, pastel, and other mediums, as well as mixed media, sculpture, pottery, and jewelry, making Rail Walk Gallery a great place to purchase a wide variety of original art. Some of the artists also offer reasonably priced reproductions of their work, including greeting cards. In addition to her artwork, Sharon Forthofer also offers a giclée-reproduction service to artists and photographers.

Rail Walk Gallery is located in Historic Downtown Salisbury, North Carolina, just four blocks north of Salisbury's Visitor Center. Looking Glass Artist Collective and Cascade Sculpture are located on either side of Rail Walk Gallery, making the 400 block of N Lee Street a great place to spend a few hours. You'll know you have arrived at Rail Walk Gallery when you see the green doors!

Gallery hours are Thursday - Saturday, 11 am - 4 pm., and by appointment.
